SLEUTH'S FINGER
AVERTS A MURDER

Pistol Against Man's Body
When Petrosini Caught
Back-Hammer.

The old game of trisette, the cause of more fights than poker and seven-up combined, landed Alessandro Girardi and Arturo Decco, the former of No.
7 Grand street, and the latter of No.
28 Lafayette street, in Centre Street Police Court to-day.

These two young men were the best of friends until trisette came between them. They played until late last night in a Lafayette street saloon and Decco won nearly every game, which means that he did all the drinking, for in trisette the loser must remain dry while the winner fairly makes himself in wine.
When the two friends parted they were not quite so friendly, and an hour later Decco was somewhat surprised when a little Italian boy came in the saloon and told him his good friend Girardi was outside to see him. He went out and came face to face with a revolver in his friend's hand.

"You shoot me!" cried Decco, grabbing the gun, and his old-time companion admitted he was thinking about taking a shot at the man who had won so many games from him.

Then they clinched. Over they rolled, first one on top then the other; and the fight was reaching a critical stage, for the gun was held against Decco's stomach, when Detective Sergeant Pe-trosini and Detective Archipoli and Botti were in sight. They rushed upon the fighters, and Petrosini just had time to insert the index finger of his left hand beneath the hammer of the weapon when Girardi pulled the trigger.
The two victims of trisette were taken to Headquarters, not far away, and Girardi was charged with felonious assault. This turn of affairs touches the heart of Decco.

"Why," said he, "I knew Girardi in our native mountains of Calabria. He was my friend, and I will not prosecute him."

But the police thought otherwise, and in order to hold him as a witness made a charge of disorderly conduct against him, saying that trisette fights must cease, as they are becoming entirely too numerous.

Petrosini is nursing a large hole in his finger where the hammer of the gun went into it, and he is certain that he saved Decco's life.
